quanta webcam-no driver needed-support inside the web browser. the others dont. i have the newest updates of the operating system. Hi, I was doing some research in to all the info I could find on the L502X series and specifically the motherboard in question. I found a thread where you tried to extract a driver for the L502X series. At no point in that thread did you indicate that it was Dell's in-house BIOS. Please help. The reason why I am asking you for help is that I have extracted a driver for the 4.2.0.1047 kernel version. This driver was extracted from the dell folder. This folder is one of 3 folders inside the extracted folder. The dell logo is on the folder and the folder name is Dell_biosin1_v5. This folder contains drivers for 6 different operating systems. The "*" folder in its name contains drivers for the L502X series. I am not sure if this is where the problem lies. The other one is called "Gigabyte_biosin0_v4" and the 3rd one is called "Lenovo_biosin0_v4". I am actually using Win 7 64 bit. Here is the link to the thread: Unfortunately, I cannot post a link to the drivers. I got access to the folders once. I did not transfer them in my USB. When I installed Windows 8.1 and selected my USB I deleted the folders. Fortunately, I still have the folder extracted. I currently have all 3 folders open. If any of you would like me to send the folders, please let me know. Once you have the folders, you can save them as a PDF, jpg, or mp3. I can send them to you if you want
